

If you have wondered about God, whose nature of existence can not be explained in any language known to man, this book may help you to gain a closer understanding of the Divine mystery. The way God may appear in the human sphere by using the physical existence of the human body as the vehicle for revealing the mystery has been described by many religions. In Christianity it is said that God has revealed Himself in Jesus Christ; in Buddhism Buddha is seen as the embodiment of the cosmic power which drives the cycles of existence in the universe. Similarly Hindus worship Krishna as the physical incarnation of the Cosmic Being. In modern time science denounces the ideas of divinity and considers the believers as people with brain dysfunction. This book is a product of such a "dysfunctional brain", who has experienced the presence of Divinity in the physical existence of a human body. The dialogues between man and God will throw new lights on the nature of existence of Christ and Buddha, who do not exist in the physical sphere but manifest through human mind, and appear within us as the Divine presence of God. The dialogues reveal a threefold nature of existence comprising of the physical substance of the world, a spiritual entity, which pervades all and manifests as mind, and God who empowers all creation. The dialogues between Man, through whom Christ manifests, and God, the cosmic power which holds all existence of the universe embodied in itself, will add to a greater understanding of the Divine Being.

A part of humanity still believes in the return of Christ and Buddha in the near future. The dialogues between man and God touch on the way such return of the Divine may take place, which may not follow the religious beliefs of the Christians or the Buddhists. The increasing spiritual awareness all around the world may indicate that the emergence of the Divine may have already occurred and Buddha and Christ are moving with us. How and where one may encounter the Divine and experience this cosmic power who incarnates amidst human beings? The book brings concepts of God and man's relation to God which are very different from the traditional religious thoughts.

ANUP REJ

Born in Kolkata, India, Anup Rej did his Ph.D. in theoretical Nuclear Physics and went to Norway in 1971 as a NORAD fellow. He has worked in medium energy nuclear physics, high-energy particle physics and cosmology in different universities in Norway, Germany, Switzerland and the US. DESCRIPTION

The book constitutes the final part of "Tathagata - A Divine Comedy for Our Time" where Tathagata transcends the limitations of the ego-bound world and sees himself as the Christ-Man, who embodies in himself the mystery of existence of both Man and God. The dialogues between the Christ-man and God touch upon the return of God to human life and reveal the nature of the incomprehensible existence of the Divine Being through an allegorical language, which grazes between the realm of knowledge and reason and a world which lies beyond all knowing and understanding by the human mind. If one wonders about God, whose nature of existence cannot be explained in any language known to man, this book may help to gain a closer understanding of the way the Divine may appear and act in human life. In modern time science denounces the ideas of Divinity and considers the believers of God as people with brain dysfunction. This book is a product of such a "dysfunctional brain" to whom God has spoken. These dialogues between man and God will throw new lights on the existence of Christ and Buddha, who do not exist in the physical plane but manifest through human mind, and appear in the inner realm as the presence of the Divine power which animates all creations in the universe.
