

The universe uses a template to build structures in different scales. It is only much more sophisticated than what the Platonists once thought when they talked about Demiurge fashioning the world from ideas. This template includes the design of a universal knot. The birth, evolution and death of cosmic objects result from the evolution of this knot. The formation of the knot brings order and tearing of the knot spreads chaos. The universe thus dances between order and chaos while regenerating structures from what dies and decays. The knot is tied with threads made of smaller knot. The smaller knots are, in turn, made of even smaller knots. Thus everything in the universe are inseparably tied together in an extremely complex fractal structure. Life evolution and death are fine tuned and play as one process in a cosmic symphony where everything participates to create the harmony and perfection of the whole. In the universe things unfolds outward and enfolds inward at the same time. Whatever goes outward from the centre returns to the source from where it once originated. In this process the creations and the creator remain inseparably tied together as one. The central element in this dynamics is a triple spiral, which resides at the centre of the object around which the knot is woven while generating the cosmic structure. This three armed spiral can be clearly seen in the centre of our observed universe (cover photo) as well as in the centre of our Milky Way galaxy where a black-hole is supposed to reside. The same triple spiral is represented in Celtic mysticism, Buddhist Wheel and Hindu Creation Chakra as well as many other religious and mystic symbolisms.

Did the Buddhist, Celts, Hindus and Platonists knew more about the mystery of the universe than the Big-bang theorists?

DESCRIPTION

In this book a new view, different from what is explained by the big-bang theory about the creation of structures in the universe, is presented. According to this alternative cosmology the universe has not begun at a particular moment of time, and is not expanding since an explosion has taken place at the beginning of creation. Instead, the universe is eternally existing without any beginning or end in time. This alternative story is based on the analysis of observational data in different wavelengths, and revolves around the idea that there exists an eternally unchanging design, which appears in a similar way in different scales. It proposes a fractal universe, which is made of smaller replicas of itself, which in turn are made of even smaller images of the same design, and so on. In it time exists as fluctuations entangled in a pattern which is timeless. The book delves with the ideas of a hidden order and deals with the concepts of chaos theory, fractal geometry and evolution of fractal knots. Through it the readers will be acquainted with a universe, fine-tuned between equilibrium and disequilibrium, swinging between order and chaos. Nothing is inseparable; no accident can ever derail the course of its path of fulfilling the eternal design, which upholds the existence of all united as ONE. It opens the vision of a profound universe where one may be able see God as inseparably one with all existing from the micro to the macro cosmos.
